

Dear FCC Commissioners

This message is to provide input to you about what I feel is a needed regulation/rule requirement.

Adelphia, my cable provider, offers access to the Internet using their cable system. However, Adelphia quotes only one price ($42.00) for this access. The rate includes both the use of their cable system, and access to their sever, for getting on the Internet.

I already have an Internet access provider, that I do not want to drop (price, $22.00).

I feel Adelphia's pricing is unfair and against the public interest. Adelphia should also offer a price that is only for cable system use, at a price less than $42.00. The result of Adelphia's price structure is to penalize those of us who would like to use Adelphia's cable system, but retain another Internet service provider. Adelphia is the only cable system, and there is a public aspect, and regulatory oversight, to their operation, as a sole source provider of this service.

One could argue that the price for the use of their cable system only should be from $20 to $25 (their present quoted price of $42, less common Internet provider prices).

I know that this might be confusing, and could well require the expertise of your staff to examine the details of the situation, and to render a FCC judgment.

Your response to me on the above would be greatly appreciated.

I am sending a copy of this message to Adelphia.

Thank you and best regards,

Richard Torian
